

Luisa Ricky

Luisa Ricky is a budding California based UX designer currently 25 years of age. I had the opportunity to start my process in creative technology cities embracing both Stanford University's psychology and computer science departments while designing interfaces not only for technology tools but also to develop theories about why people use or prefer certain devices.

Luisa has always been driven by such passion to create easy to use and human centred integration of digital solutions. She was famous for the foresight she had to understand the users' wants before they thought of them. Her designs were almost so clever that she was jokingly referred to as a 'mind reader' of UX.
